Report details

Context

1. Norwich is a city which sees culture as central to its identity. England's first world UNESCO city of literature and home to the fourth largest arts festival in the country, five theatres, two universities, two cathedrals, the Sainsbury Centre of Visual Arts, an award-winning Arts Centre, and an increasingly young, creative and tech savvy population.
2. For many years Norwich City Council has played a critical role in creating and developing the cultural sector as a collaborator, civic leader, enabler and deliverer. We have a portfolio of heritage assets, many of which are used for cultural purposes. e.g., The Guildhall, Dragon Hall and the Halls and a range of historic churches as well as being the leaseholder of the Theatre Royal. The council worked closely with the sector to support safe re-opening following the Covid-19 pandemic.
3. The council has provided sustained cultural investment in our key organisations enabling them to effectively plan, develop partnerships and support early career and emerging artists and organisations, and provide valuable match funding for significant Arts Council England investment into the city.
4. Norwich City Council's event team designs and delivers a programme of high profile, mass participation, free events, including the Lord Mayor's Weekend and Christmas Switch On. The team works collaboratively with partners to engage local and national groups, artists and organisations. We provide support and advice to partners such as the Love Light Festival, Norfolk & Norwich Festival, Run Norwich, Norwich Pride, as well as organisers of hire events to ensure a safe and diverse programme of festivals and activities takes place across the city and in our parks each year.

Norwich Creative City Compact

5. The Norwich Creative City Compact (Cultural Compact) was established in late 2019. Cultural Compacts are an Arts Council England initiative and a recommendation of the Key Cities Enquiry. The role of Cultural Compacts is to:
  - a) Embed culture within vision and strategy for place, having developed a clear ambition for what the sector can locally contribute (culturally, socially, economically);
  - b) Strengthen the place of culture within local networks, partnerships and formal leadership and decision making frameworks;
  - c) Effectively align the local cultural sector with key government priorities
  - d) Better include the perspectives and insights of all stakeholders in the cultural sector of the place, placing particular importance on those who would otherwise be at risk of exclusion from the compact, from the cultural sector, or from cultural opportunity more broadly (including communities, individuals and those working freelance or voluntarily in the cultural sector).

6. The Norwich Creative City Compact membership includes senior representative from The Forum Trust (chair), Norfolk & Norwich Festival, Norfolk Museums Service, Young Norfolk Arts Trust & LCEP, Norwich University of the Arts, University of East Anglia, Norwich Arts Centre, National Centre for Writing, Norwich Theatre, Norwich City Council and the Norwich Business Improvement District
7. The aim of the Compact is to ensure culture, arts and creativity remain a key contributor to the life of the city. Across the network of Compacts, those that are most effective are able to build capacity and resilience and leverage funding through place-based partnerships.

The Action Plan for Culture

8. The Action Plan for Culture (Appendix 1) has been developed with input from key stakeholders as part of the Norwich Creative City Compact. The document has both short-term and long-term aims and articulates the key areas where partners can mobilise to contribute to culture and creativity in Norwich in 2023 and 2024. It provides the building blocks for Norwich City Council and its partners to co-produce a Cultural Strategy for Norwich from 2025.
9. The Action Plan for Culture has been developed to:
  - a) Set a clear vision and ambition for culture in the city
  - b) Articulate the actions and commitments Norwich City Council are making to culture
  - c) Inform the Creative City Compact's work programme and support the identification of shared pieces of work that can be taken forward
  - d) Act as a tool to support future funding bids for Compact partners and the Compact itself
  - e) Set the platform for the development of a more detailed Cultural Needs Analysis, and a longer-term Cultural Strategy for the city for 2025 onwards – our aim is that this will act as a statement of the Compact's ambition and delivery plans, and to ensure continued partnership working longer term.

Consultation

10. Sector wide consultation was carried out by Tom Fleming Creative Consultancy between mid-2021 to early 2022. The research and consultation aimed to bring together views, ideas and challenges from a wide range of cultural voices through discussions groups, interviews and conversations.
11. Consultation on the contents of the Action Plan for Culture was carried out with Creative City Compact members at events in September 2022, and January and February 2023
12. A key deliverable within the Action Plan for Culture is regular, inclusive stakeholder consultation and engagement events. This will inform development and implementation of the Cultural Strategy and support better partnerships and exchange across the cultural ecosystem of Norwich.

Implications

Financial and resources

13. Any decision to reduce or increase resources or alternatively increase income must be made within the context of the council's stated priorities, as set out in its Corporate Plan 2022-26 and budget.
14. There are no proposals in this report that would reduce or increase resources and the identified actions are deliverable within existing budgets and resource.

Legal

15. There are no specific statutory duties on local authorities for the provision of support to the arts and cultural sector. Specific actions within the plan and events held will require consideration at an operational delivery level with regards statutory responsibilities for equality and diversity, crime and disorder reduction, safeguarding and health and safety.

Statutory considerations

Appendix 1 – Action Plan for Culture

1. Foreword from Council Leader

Norwich has a history of being a focus of regional cultural activity and with much to be proud of. The city has six theatres, a UK top four international arts festival, an award-winning arts centre, nationally significant museum collections and an ever-growing number of diverse independent galleries. It also has 1,500 listed buildings, a castle and two cathedrals.

The Norfolk and Norwich Millennium Library, housed in the magnificent Forum in the heart of Norwich, is one of the most-visited public libraries in the UK and lends more items than any other in the country. Norwich draws immense benefit from the creative output of being home to the University of East Anglia, the Norwich University of the Arts and Norwich City College.

In 2012, Norwich consolidated its position as England's foremost literary city by becoming the country's first UNESCO City of Literature, joining an elite international network that now includes Edinburgh, Melbourne, Iowa City, Dublin, Reykjavik, Kraków, Nottingham, Dunedin, Granada, Manchester and Prague.

Today, people in Norwich spend more per capita on culture than anywhere else in the UK and the city remains a destination for poets, novelists, biographers, playwrights, translators, editors, literary critics, social critics, historians, environmentalists and philosophers.

Investment and active involvement in the arts and cultural sector is a political priority of the city council. Despite local government funding pressures, we have managed to maintain funding and support for the sector. The council is also an active participant through its own programme of free cultural events, as well as acting as a convenor of partners using its civic leadership role.

Through our strong relationship with Arts Council England (ACE) and membership of the 27 strong Key Cities Group, Norwich has played an influential role in shaping cultural policy at the national level. We were represented on the Cultural Cities Enquiry (2019) which first recommended Cultural Compacts. Norwich was one of the first pilots. The recently published 'Culture and Place in Britain' (February 2023): a collaboration between Key Cities and Arts Council England, confidently asserts the proposition of the vital role arts and culture can play "to create healthier and more prosperous places for everyone". A view which is gaining traction with national politicians and across a growing number of Whitehall departments.

Arts and culture are critical to realising the five underpinning themes of the Norwich 2040 Vision. A city which is 'creative', 'liveable', 'dynamic', 'fair' and 'connected'; the arts and culture strands permeates and blends into each theme, in turn shaping the city council's Corporate Plan.

The ambition and purpose of the Action Plan for Culture confidently asserts that cultural expression has a wider societal purpose and goes to the core of what it is to be human. 'The Inner Level' (2018) by Richard Wilkinson and Kate Pickett demonstrates how more equal societies improve everyone's well-being. In such societies the arts have been shown to flourish, participation increase and creativity spreading its roots. Fostering that positive direction is the purpose of this report.

Linked to tackling deepening inequality, is the climate crisis. In November 2022, 'A climate mural for our times' was installed in City Hall's council chamber. The mural is a collaboration between the artist Gennadiy Ivanov; The Climatic Research Unit at UEA; and Norwich City Council which captures visually, in the most impactful way, the challenges that we face. It is a call to action to avoid disaster. It is the power of art to reset our priorities and, by doing so, help us to work towards building a sustainable society with equality at its core.

2. Introduction

This action plan has been developed by Norwich City Council with input from key stakeholders as part of the Norwich Creative City Compact. This action plan commits the city council to a series of deliverables and actions that will support the development of a Cultural Strategy for Norwich in 2025, aligned to the Norwich 2040 Vision. This document articulates the key areas of focus around which other stakeholders can mobilise to contribute to the vibrant ecosystem of arts, culture and creativity in Norwich between 2023 and 2024, and through which a longer-term strategy and collaborative action can emerge.

This document has both a short-term and long-term aim. In the short-term it will enable the city council and its partners to consolidate relationships and initiate collaborative action after a period of disruption due to Covid, organisational change and changes in funding. In the longer-term it will enable the city council and its partners in the Creative City Compact to build on the existing strong foundations of our vibrant creative city to co-produce a Cultural Strategy for Norwich from 2025. It is intended therefore to be both a firm commitment to action and collaboration in the short to medium-term as well as providing key building blocks for that future strategy. It is also intended as a platform for wider engagement with a range of diverse stakeholders, and as an invitation to action and dialogue within the arts and culture ecosystem of the city. It will also support the strengthening of relationships between Norwich and key national funders and investors, such as Arts Council England.

The Creative City Compact has been supported by Arts Council England and Norwich City Council with a mission to champion the role of culture, attract investment, and facilitate impactful collaboration and exchange across the cultural ecosystem of Norwich. The current membership consists of National Centre for Writing, Norwich Business Improvement District, Norfolk Museums Service, Norfolk & Norwich Festival, Norwich Arts Centre, Norwich City Council, Norwich Theatre, Norwich University of the Arts, The Forum, Young Norfolk Arts Trust and University of East Anglia. The action plan has been developed by the partners through commissioning background research from Tom Fleming Consultancy, identifying individual and collective opportunities and assets, and co-creating a vision to which they can align strategically.

There is a complex and changing policy landscape in which this action plan is situated. Locally, the Norwich 2040 Vision articulates a shared overarching strategic vision for Norwich. The city council's own Corporate Plan articulates the city council's role in achieving this vision. Regional cultural strategy and ambition is captured by the Norfolk and Suffolk Culture Board's 'Culture Drives Impact' whilst the accompanying data pack shows the significance of arts and culture to the region, and the criticality of Norwich within that. At a national level, Arts Council England's 10 Year Strategy 'Let's Create' lays out the national vision and outcomes that shape their investment. Individual cultural stakeholders, including the Creative City Compact Partners, also produce their own organisational strategies. This action plan has been developed with reference to this complex landscape, but is primarily focused on the key assets, activities and resources that the city council has at its disposal.

Norwich City Council has a key role within the arts and culture sector in Norwich. For many years the council has been and continues to be, a driving force for culture in the city. Despite years of austerity from central government and when many other local authorities have stepped back from a role in culture, Norwich City Council has continued to invest just over £1million per year in the sector. The Council supports arts and culture organisations, both financially and through 'in-kind' provision of assets and resources and helps others to access funding streams. It maintains its own programme of free cultural events, such as the annual Lord Mayor's Weekend and supports a vibrant programme of festivals and events in our city and parks. Its assets, including the Halls, Dragon Hall, the Guildhall, historic churches, parks and open spaces, and many more, provide key cultural infrastructure for the city. However, arguably, its greatest role is as a civic leader and convener of partners. All these roles are reflected in the following pages

3. The importance of arts, culture and creativity

Norwich is one of the UK's leading cities of culture. Culture is central to its economy, its communities, its sense of place and its wider reputation. Culture is the very essence of a city – one that has brought diverse communities together for centuries, to thrive through proximity, connection and exchange.

Norwich is a UNESCO City of Literature and a City of Refuge, proud of its deep long-standing international connections. The city has a depth and breadth of historical assets, renowned organisations and institutions and a thriving ecosystem of artists, producers and performers. Economically and intellectually boosted by two world-class universities, the city has a thriving knowledge-based economy, with creativity at its heart delivering research, innovation and productivity.

Norwich has a vibrant visitor economy, driven by culture, heritage, nightlife, independent retail, food and drink. Culture plays an important role in the city's social provision, helping to tackle the challenges faced by the most vulnerable and marginal groups and bringing communities together.

Key metrics of the importance of the sector to the vibrancy and economy of the city and the region include:

- Norwich is the leading local authority GVA from culture in the New Anglia LEP area (c. £50m in 2018 – the latest available data)
- At least 4.6% of the Norwich workforce is employed in businesses defined as in cultural and creative sectors (not including many self-employed/freelancers and those employed in businesses who are not VAT registered) compared with 2.6% for the wider LEP area (2021 data).

- Arts Council England invest nearly £4m per year into our National Portfolio Organisations
- Developing evidence of the impact of arts and culture on health, wellbeing and community is an ambition as part of this action plan but case studies throughout this document show that the impact is wider than simply the economic. The city council and its partners are committed to building on these strong foundations through the achievement of its co-created vision.

4. Vision

Our vision is that culture, arts and creativity enhance their contribution to the life of the city and to the achievement of the Norwich 2040 Vision, through the realisation of the five themes of that co-produced vision:

Creative City

“Norwich is a place where culture and creativity play an important part in how the city feels about itself and others perceive it. In 2040, Norwich will be world- renowned for its creativity – a leader in innovation, culture, education and invention.”

We are seeking to create a city where talent is developed at all stages of life and career, including children, young people in their early careers or post tertiary education, freelancers and people in mid-career who are looking to pivot or refocus their careers into arts and culture.

Liveable City

“The city takes pride in being a place with a great local environment that people value. We are committed to shifting to clean energy by 2040 (carbon-neutral by 2045). We will support and promote sustainable living – where today’s citizens meet the needs of the present without compromising future generations.”

We are seeking to enhance the contribution of cultural activity and the creative sector to both debate and action around the environmental and climate crisis. We will do this through what we do (e.g. events, platforms and creative activity) as well as how we do it (e.g. sharing resources and reducing environmental impact).

Dynamic City

“Norwich has two successful universities and thriving life sciences, creative, tech, leisure and retail sectors. In 2040, Norwich will be a place where entrepreneurs, social enterprises, national and global companies choose to provide good jobs, prosperity and success.”

Arts and culture already bring significant investment and represent regionally important economic activity. We are seeking to consolidate and build on this by building the evidence base for further capital investment and creating the conditions and infrastructure for creative entrepreneurs and businesses to thrive.

A Fair City

“Norwich is a place where many already enjoy a great quality of life. By 2040, the health, wellbeing and life chances of all our citizens will be improved. We will remove barriers to achievement and a high standard of living will be enjoyed by everyone.” We are seeking to enhance the contribution of arts and culture to the health and wellbeing of residents, whilst increasing the inclusivity and diversity of cultural activity, with a particular focus on those who are identified as marginalised.

A Connected City

“At the heart of any good city is how well it connects with both its citizens and the world at large. In 2040, Norwich will have a modern transport system, be at the forefront of digital connectivity and create opportunities for all residents to link with each other.”

Arts and culture will play a key role in connecting communities to each other and act as a platform for connection to the wider world, through attracting visitors, creative people and attention to the city, including to national funding and policy programmes.

The progress towards the longer-term strategy will be overseen by the Creative City Compact partners. Collating and improving understanding of data is a key part of this work and will enable the city council and partners to better understand and evaluate the impact of arts and culture in the city. Decisions about council resource allocation and priorities will remain within the council's governance, informed by the views of the partners.

Creative City Compact Commitment

In addition to the city council's own deliverables and actions, the Creative City Compact partners have also committed to continuing to collaborate and to explore the governance of the group in the light of examples of compacts in other parts of the UK. They may for example explore models such as becoming a Community Interest Company or developing a collaborative funding model. It will also explore how this group can link more effectively or formally with the Local Cultural Educational Partnership (LCEP). Alongside this, the partnership will review its membership to ensure that it reflects an appropriate breadth of stakeholder expertise and perspective, including from outside the formal arts and cultural sector. The group will then establish a work programme to agree collaborative action and support the development of the co-created Cultural Strategy from 2025.

Case Studies

Inclusive Arts

Arts and culture in Norwich reaches diverse audiences in myriad ways. In 2022, 35% of all bookings made for Norwich Theatre performances and activities were made by those living within the 3 most deprived lower super output area deciles on the index of multiple deprivation. 20% off all tickets at Norwich Theatre's venues are made available at either £10 or with targeted concessionary discounts to break down barriers to attendance.

Young people are engaged through the work of many organisations, including Young Norfolk Arts, whose 2022 festival (the first full one since 2019) involved the participation of 1877 young people, whilst 6583 Young people took part in the Local Cultural Education Partnership's (LCEP) Figurine it out and Postcard Poems projects in 2021 and 2022.

Greening the Norfolk & Norwich Festival

The Norfolk & Norwich Festival believe that the arts have an important role to play in exploring, communicating and taking practical action against issues around climate change and the environment.

The festival recognises that operations and activity have an impact on the environment, and are committed to measuring, understanding and reducing the festival's environmental impact. They seek to encourage dialogue and inspire change through the artistic and learning programmes, and in work with artists, partners, networks and audiences. In 2022 this includes:

- In collaboration with Norwich City Council, installing renewable mains electric into Chapelfield (Festival) Gardens
- Registered with Culture Declares Emergency and joined Vision: 2025, aiming to reduce Festival greenhouse emissions by 50% by 2025
- Courtesy of Motus Mercedes, the Festival production van was electric, facilitated by a partnership with Inchcape Norwich BMW
- Provided compostable toilets in the Festival Gardens
- Using programming to educate and advocate. Manifesto and Flood were just two of these projects in the 2022 programme
- In the Festival Gardens, applying 'Green Trading Standards' which include ensuring all serve ware is compostable, all drinkware reusable and food offerings are meat and fish-free.

Connecting communities through literature

The National Centre for Writing's creative engagement programmes makes spaces for people of all ages to be creative with words and imagination. This includes Multilingual Creators, which is a school's programme connecting the centre's learning, participation and translation work.

This trained four Norfolk-based emerging literary translators to deliver workshops in secondary schools for 180 young people who are Additional Language Speakers or have an interest in languages. This work was part of a network with sister regional literature development organisations in the North and Midlands, with 15 translators in total delivering similar sessions in their areas.

Art and Culture means Health and Wellbeing

Norwich University of the Arts has an ongoing partnership with Hospital Rooms, a national organisation co-creating art with users of mental health in-patient services that transforms the healthcare environment. Their work at Northside House in Norwich has involved artists including Associate Professor Carl Rowe, France-Lise McGurn, Norwich University of the Arts' graduate Jade Montserrat, and Turner prize-nominated artist Dexter Dalwood. The projects were funded by the University, Norfolk and Suffolk NHS Foundation Trust, and Arts Council England.

They evidence the power of creative arts to build a fair and creative city, where wellbeing leads to inclusion, changing lives for the better.

Further evidence of the impact of culture can be seen in a survey of those attending performances at Norwich Theatre venues across 2022, which saw 80% of respondents reporting feeling happier as a result of their experience at the theatre.

Norwich Theatre's Creative Community Recovery Programme

In March 2020 Norwich Theatre closed its venues due to Covid-19 Government restrictions. As it was unable to welcome people to see shows or to take part in workshops and classes in person, Norwich Theatre adapted and re-invented its Take Part programme specifically to meet the needs of the local community in the wake of the pandemic. Through the Creative Community Recovery Programme, it was able to continue to connect with those most in need. Norwich Theatre was awarded the Best Age Friendly Outreach Award at the national Fantastic for Families Awards for the project.
